I am currently employed by the Washington State Department of Agriculture as a Public Health Advisor II. I work with local growers to help them understand and comply with upcoming federal regulations under the new Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA). Previously I worked as a research coordinator at MD Anderson Cancer Hospital while in graduate school for my MPH. Before graduate school, I worked in public water as an Environmental Scientist with the Montana State Department of Environmental Quality. I have a strong background in state and federal environmental codes and regulations and have often served as a conduit between the public, government agencies and local communities.

10. Please describe why you're interested in serving on this board or commission

During my undergraduate degree, I worked on published studies investigating the effects of pathogenic marine bacteria (Vibrio spp.) on symbiotic zooxanthellae algae within coral tissues, coupled with increasing sea surface temperatures. I have a broad knowledge of marine pathogens and invertebrate species. I am passionate about marine conservation, and would be thrilled to aid the Marine Resources Committee in any way I can.
