I want to be a part of local and worldwide [to acknowledge scope] efforts to preserve the sustainability of our county, country, and world. An ongoing, habitable planet, is more important than pretty much any other issues being addressed [or not]. Progress has been [statewide citizens climate assembly] made. We're already seeing the effects of a 1.5 C. rise in temperature with more already guaranteed. Local challenges are massive given increased frequencies of extreme weather events, and some vulnerable flood plains and such. Local mitigation will be little more than a model for others, [on a larger scale] but not to be dismissed as every straw adds to the weight of healing. Pardon my hyperbole, but metaphor is not always inappropriate. Thank-you, Mark Waschke. [off the top of my head]
