I am interested in serving on the Food System Committee because of my desire to be a part of promoting sustainable food systems and increasing food access. My passion for holistic nourishment through food has evolved into a foundational belief in the transformative power of healthy, equitable, and sustainable food consumption. This passion has led me to various roles in the food industry, including my current one as Director of Administration at the Ferndale Food Bank. Working in these roles I have seen the way food systems at large affect a community's overall well being. I have also seen how some of the most vulnerable actors in food systems are those with limited food access. These experiences have strengthened my commitment to being a part of providing communities with accessible, high-quality food that also benefits every player in the production chain as much as possible. In the Food Access seat on this committee I would be honored to use my experiences to advocate for those vulnerable populations in our community as a part of greater food system decisions.
